For the summer vacations that year, Ahmed was staying with his grandmother in Lahore. In the afternoons, once he had had his lunch, his uncle took him to the nearby park to play on days when the weather was pleasant.

While Ahmed was taking a stroll in the park one day, all of a sudden, he heard a faint “Meow!” He looked around, and saw a thin, hungry kitten at his feet. “Meow!” the kitten tried getting his attention again. It scampered up to Ahmed and his uncle, and started following them wherever they went. “Its fur looks so soft and is of so many different shades of grey!” exclaimed Ahmed. “Can I pet it? Can we keep it?” he asked with excitement.

“Well, it doesn’t look like its mother is around and we can’t leave it outside as it may get hurt,” said uncle, “so, why not? Let’s take this little bundle of joy home.” They took the kitten home, where they bathed it, gave it a small kitty collar and named her Nyla. Ahmed smiled at his new furry friend and said, “You’re all mine and I promise to take good care of you.”
